2.9.6.7 Financial Needs

To ensure that Florida's airport system can support Destination 2035, significant investment will be needed at the private, local, state, and federal levels. As was previously discussed in this document in Section 2.9.6.6, Goal 3, when commercial airport TSA security requirements are considered, at least $7.2 billion in federal, state, and local funding will be needed over the next five years to fully respond to all needs of the Florida airport as identified in JACIP. Section 2.9.6.6 of this report contains information by CFASPP region on total funding needs by airport category and type of project for the next five years. This section focuses on FDOT funding requests by FDOT District for that same time frame. Since FDOT funding is allocated by District as opposed to CFASPP region, this funding discussion focuses on each FDOT District as opposed to each CFASPP region as has been the case in previous sections of this report. In addition, this section also compares total FDOT funds that have been allocated strictly to FDOT funding requests. All information discussed in this section is for the 2005-2009 timeframe.

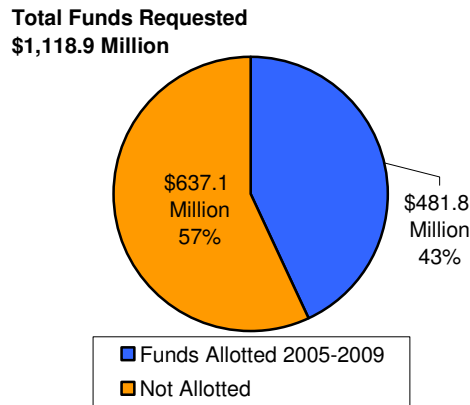

In the next five years alone, Florida airports have identified the need for over $1.1 billion in state funding for improvements. To date, funding has been allocated to meet less than half of these needs. Similar shortfalls from other funding sources can also be anticipated. In this constrained financial environment, FDOT must identify those improvements most critical to the success of Florida's future airport system.

Statewide Summary

Through fees and taxes levied on aviation, a portion of the development of the nation's airport system is funded by the FAA through the Airport Improvement Program (AIP). As one of the nation's busiest aviation states, Florida makes a significant contribution each year to the Federal Aviation Trust Fund, which is the source of AIP funding. It is estimated that for every $1 Florida contributes to the Federal Aviation Trust Fund, less than 70 cents is reinvested in Florida airports. Clearly, Florida's need and its critical role in the national and international air transportation systems warrant a higher return on its contribution to the Trust Fund.

As indicated in Exhibit 2.9.6.7-6.8, FDOT has allotted approximately $481.8 million (43 percent of total requested FDOT funding) to airports in the State for the five-year funding period. The remaining 57 percent of FDOT funding requests by public airports in the State have not been allotted at this time. As previously discussed, when all JACIP funding requests for 2005 – 2009 are considered, a total of $6.2 billion has been submitted. This amount does not include an estimated additional $1 billion that is needed to meet TSA mandates at commercial airports in Florida nor does it include funds that may be needed to respond to new (May 2004) TSA security guidelines for general aviation (community) airports. When total funds that have been allocated by FDOT are compared to a total of at least $7.2 billion that will be needed to fully respond to all airport requests over the next five years, FDOT allocated funding accounts for only seven percent of the total that has been requested by all airports.
